

“Staff Wellbeing: The employer and employee perspective”

Abstract:

This talk will consider how UK employers traditionally manage employee health and wellbeing and how this affects data capture, management reporting and strategy. It will share how the University of Sheffield has adopted a very different approach to staff wellbeing. We will consider the underpinning values, its use of technology and how this has influenced the organisational approach to wellbeing and its data collection and management.

The talk will be delivered from the perspective of the employer (Andy Dodman) and from the employee and Union Representative (Maureen Howard).
